

MS01VT11 FAQSafeMedications

[Music]

So, it's very key that you have a conversation with your physician about your current medications prior to conception. For patients with hypertension and diabetes, some medications are okay to use and some should be avoided because they're not the healthiest to use in pregnancy.

There are things that are safer than others, and it's important that the patient comes and talks to whoever their provider is so that we can make the best choice for them.

Bring in all your medications, and we'll talk about the risks and benefits of that medication and the risks and benefits of an alternative. Every medication and patient is different, so we just need to see what it is and talk about it.
