

MS08 Your Developing Baby v1 540

[MUSIC]

At 29 to 32 weeks the baby weighs in between two and a half and three and a half pounds. The baby at this point has reached what we call viability which means it has the capability to survive.

It's continuing to get bigger and stronger. It also is starting to practice breathing. And the way a baby breathes in utero is it breathes in and out amniotic fluid.

The baby's lungs are getting ready to exchange oxygen.

And the baby's still moving around but it's running out of room so it may not have as big of movements at this time but you'll still be feeling about five movements an hour except for when the baby's sleeping.
